When it comes to Taiwan, people often think of its high-tech industry. Today, they also think of the movie director, Ang Lee. Directing his first movie in 1992, Lee has made plenty of award-winning movies.

Lee’s early movies include Pushing Hands, The Wedding Banquet, and Eat Drink Man Woman. These three movies are known as the “Father Knows Best” trilogy, for there is a father with traditional values having conflicts with his children in the movies. The trilogy won many awards in Taiwan and overseas. Among them, The Wedding Banquet, which describes the family problems after a fake wedding, is Ang Lee’s first movie that deals with gay issues and that won Best Director at the Golden Horse Award.

Lee did not stop there, however. In 2005, the movie Brokeback Mountain brought him to a new peak in his career. This movie, which deals with gay issues with a subject of cowboys in the United States, found great success. It won three Academy Awards, including the award for Best Director. Generally speaking, there are good and bad ads. Good ads are usually inspiring, and they present the products in an honest way. Most importantly, they are socially responsible. They show a positive influence over the consumers.

In contrast, bad ads manipulate the public into a certain way of thinking. These ads may persuade consumers to believe they can be happy only if they own certain things. Moreover, because of these ads, people may start to think they need certain brands to be like the “perfect people” they see on TV. That is, this type of ad may encourage consumers to buy an expensive watch or a luxurious bag that they don’t really need.

It is important for people to know the difference between the things they need and the things they want. Before we buy a product, we should ask ourselves: Is the claim in the ad true? Is the ad trying to sell a useful product, or is it selling something that no one really needs? These questions can help us interpret the ads and avoid buying something useless.

(C) What is Beauty? Scientists who study the human brain think they have the answer. According to a study, our brains develop in a way that we would be attracted to members of the opposite sex who offer the greatest chance of producing healthy children. That is, to the human brain, beauty has a lot to do with health.

In the study, men have been found to be most attracted to women with certain characteristics. They prefer women with balanced face features, soft flawless skin, bright white teeth, shiny hair, and shapely body. All of these characteristics are related to bearing and raising healthy children. Scientists believe that a balanced face features indicate a strong genetic makeup. A strong genetic makeup would carry over to other important qualities such as the ability to resist disease. Lovely skin, teeth, and hair indicate that the woman is in good health. A shapely body means that the woman is able to give birth to a child.
