三、綜合測驗 Part I 習作

1. Henrietta Lack was an African-American. She began to suffer from a __31__ cancer at a young age. Before she died, a surgeon took some cell samples of her tumor __32__ the absence of her and her family's permission. Then, the doctor applied her cells to create the world's first immortal human cell line for medical research, which came to be known as the HeLa cells.

As a matter of fact, scientists __33__ very hard to keep human cells alive in culture for decades, but those cells always ended up dying. __34__, Henrietta's cells were different. Her cells reproduced an entire generation every twenty-four hours without ever __35__, and they became the first immortal human cells ever successfully __36__ in a laboratory.

Henrietta's cells have now been living outside her body __37__ longer than they ever lived inside it. In addition, even though __38__ exactly how many of Henrietta's cells are alive today, some scientists have estimated that all of the HeLa cells ever cultured would weigh more than 50 billion kilograms. These cells were one of the most significant medical developments of the past hundred years.

Despite Henrietta's contributions to the world, __39__ people, including her family, really knew about this situation. When informed of the existence of HeLa cells, Henrietta's family fumed __40__ what the doctor had done and felt that Henrietta had been exploited. To honor Henrietta, it is time that the public knew the truth and appreciated her contributions to the world.

Imagine that you were in extreme pain, and doctors could not help you. Would you suffer, or would it be better to commit suicide? Today, the right to die is a topic of much debate.

In Britain, a woman suffering from a 51 brain disease wanted her husband to help her die. Being too weak, the woman could not kill herself. In fact, she had no control over her body and lived in a miserable condition. Unfortunately, her husband would go to jail for murder if he helped her. The woman found it wrong, and said this violated her rights as a human being.

A similar dilemma happened in the United States. A woman in Florida had been unconscious for many years. Her husband wanted to 52 the machines that maintained her life, but the woman's parents said no even though she was brain dead. 53, the woman was let to die peacefully, but it was fifteen years later after her husband won with legal help.

Many do not conceive of euthanasia (安樂死) as something acceptable, so there are 54 conservatives protesting against it or regarding it as murder. However, this is beginning to change. A few countries now 55 a living will that tells doctors and family members one's wishes to die if contracting incurable disease. Some states in the U.S. have granted assisted suicide. Moreover, some countries, like Netherlands and Belgium, go a step further to legalize euthanasia, leaving the choice to the patient.

Part II

(A) punished (B) forced (C) architectures (D) nonsense (E) passages

The Great Pyramid is the largest of the famous pyramids located outside Cairo in Egypt. It was built over 4,500 years ago by the Pharaoh Khufu. Basically, pyramids are the 56 where Egyptian pharaohs and their families were placed after they died. Khufu's pyramid was so huge that it took over 20 years to build.

There are several theories about who built the pyramid. It was firstly believed that Khufu 57 foreign workers to build it. Another popular belief was that the Great Pyramid was built by aliens, though some considered it 58. Recently, someone assumed that the ordinary people of ancient Egypt might have built it, and they were all paid for their work.

The Great Pyramid consists of about two million great blocks of stone. Inside it, there are complicated 59 leading to different chambers. The Great Pyramid had remained the world's tallest building for more than 3,800 years.

Even today, the greatest of the pyramids still attracts millions of visitors annually. Despite the curse that anyone disturbing the tomb would be 60, tourists still flock to wonder at the astonishing building still standing after thousands of years. As they look up, they will understand the old Arab proverb which says, "Man fears time, but time fears the Pyramids."
