V. 閱讀測驗 (10%) :

It's a common situation: You are hungry, but there are no restaurants open and there's nothing to eat in the kitchen. What would you do? The answer, as you may already know, is to get some instant noodles.

Instant noodles are popular because they provide a quick and convenient meal. The person who invented instant noodles is Momofuku Ando (Wu Pai-fu). He was born in Taiwan in 1910 and moved to Japan in 1933. One day, when he was walking on a street, he noticed that many people were waiting in line for a bowl of simple noodles. This gave him an idea—to make noodles that were delicious, inexpensive, and easy to prepare. Thus, he started to do experiments with noodles. In 1958, he successfully created his first chicken-flavored instant noodles. All people had to do was add hot water, wait for three minutes, and stir. Later, he renamed his company "Nissin Food Products Co., Ltd." and continued to create more kinds of instant noodles.

Momofuku Ando is now said to be the father of instant noodles. He has become a legend in the food industry. However, his invention was not a recipe for instant success. It took years of hard work to make his dream come true.
