Gambling is an activity which has been around for thousands of years. It comes in many different forms, including card games, dice games, and mechanical games, such as slot machines or the roulette wheel. Gambling also includes betting on sporting events and buying lottery tickets. Some people even say that stock exchange is also a kind of gambling. Without a doubt, gambling is a popular activity for many people. But why is gambling so appealing?

In fact, some basic concepts from psychology can explain why gambling is so appealing to some people. To begin with, optimism is usually seen as a good thing in life. However, when it comes to gambling, too much optimism may cause someone to focus on the upsides of winning while ignoring the downsides of losing. Next, it is natural for people to try to make sense of random things. People sometimes come up with a system that they think will help them win the game. What's more, most of the time gamblers would only remember the happy feeling when they win, yet forget the moments they lose and feel bad. The feeling of winning can be something addictive for gamblers.

Gambling is a form of entertainment which can be fun and satisfying. However, it is important that we understand winning is just a matter of chance and luck. We should let gambling remain just a kind of entertainment instead of making it an addiction.

39. ( ) Which is NOT the reason to explain the popularity of gambling?
- (A) People having little optimism focus on the good things from gambling.
  - (B) People enjoy finding a system to help them in winning a game.
  - (C) Many people tend to remember the feeling of winning rather the feeling of losing.
  - (D) The gamblers are addicted to the feeling of winning.
40. ( ) According to this passage, what is author's attitude toward gambling?

- (A) The author thinks gambling is exciting but dangerous, so only adults can play.
- (B) The author thinks gambling is satisfying, so people are encouraged to take risks and gamble.
- (C) The author thinks gambling can be a good entertainment as long as people do not get addicted to it.
- (D) The author thinks gambling requires luck and chance, so people should not try such a risky game.
